New Delhi: In its second year, the Schools of Specialised Excellence (SoSE) have received close to 80,000 applications, nearly four times higher than last year. Among the five specialisations, the maximum number of applications has come in for Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM). The newly introduced Armed Forces Preparatory School (AFPS) has received over 18,000 applications for the 200 seats on offer. For the 2021-22 academic session, 26,687 applications were received for the 20 new SoSEs. This year, 11 more such schools have been added, with AFPS set up as a residential school at Jharoda Kalan. SoSEs are specialised schools affiliated to the Delhi Board of School Education and follow the International Baccalaureate programme. Admissions to STEM and AFPS are being conducted for Classes IX and XI. For other specialisations — humanities, performing and visual arts and 21st-century skills — new students are being taken in only for Class IX. Of the 31 SoSEs, 12 have STEM whereas seven offer humanities, performing and visual arts. Seven schools offer 21st-century skills. Admissions to these courses are taking place through an entrance exam, which are already under way. The process will end on March 28. As much as 50% of seats are reserved for students of Delhi government schools. To be eligible, one needs to be a resident studying in a Delhi school. AFPS was announced in the 2021 Budget. In the first session, 120 boys and 80 girls will be admitted. For Class IX, as many as 7,260 applications have been received. The number for Class XI is far higher at 11,868. For admission to this course, interviews and medical/physical examinations will be conducted, apart from an aptitude test. "The physical and medical examinations will be similar to the requirements for National Defence Academy," a senior government official said. The government has roped in retired Army officers to train the students. The school will have an academic and a service preparatory wing. In Classes IX and X, the students will pursue the basics in subjects like mathematics, English, Hindi (spoken and written), general sciences and social sciences.

New Delhi: Almost two-thirds of the 43 joint secretaries and additional secretaries appointed last month by the Centre were non-IAS officers, indicating that those from the allied services are now manning key posts in the middle rung of the central bureaucracy. Things have reached a stage where some of the ministries have no IAS officers posted as a joint secretary. Data from department of personnel and training (DoPT) shows that over the last decade — from 2011 to 2020 — share of all IAS officers in the central deputation at the level of deputy secretaries and above under the Central Staffing Scheme (CSS) had dropped to as low as 34%, before going up. This has meant officers from forest, postal, railways, ordinance factories and even information services are driving policy making. The acute shortage of IAS officers — described as generalists in the bureaucracy — coming for central deputation has prompted government to review rules, prompting a volley of protest from the states, particularly those ruled by opposition parties. TOI spoke to several serving and former IAS officers to find the reasons behind the fall in the number of appointments of IAS officers in the joint secretary level. Most of them said there are fewer IAS officers available at middle level for appointment at the joint secretary level and states are also facing shortage of such officers. Officers blame the sharp reduction in the intake between 1998 and 2006. Usually, direct-recruit IAS officers get empanelled as joint secretaries after 15-16 years of service. Besides, living standards in state capitals comparable with those in national capital, a Delhi posting seems to have lost its charm. A top down approach to policy initiatives has reduced the attraction for a central deputation with those looking for future posting at additional secretary or secretary level now opting for it. Several officers also said that the intense pressure, requiring them to be on their toes, is also a reason for fewer IAS officers at the Centre.

Jammu & Kashmir delim draft unveiled, outcry over changes

Srinagar: The J&K Delimitation Commission on Monday published the draft of its proposals to redraw, rename or reserve assembly and parliamentary constituencies of the Union Territory along with two dissenting notes from Farooq Abdullah's National Conference. The commission will accept public feedback on the proposals, some of which have invited criticism even from BJP till March 21, reports Saleem Pandit. The gazette notification mentions 90 assembly constituencies, of which Jammu division accounts for 43, six more than when J&K was a state that included Ladakh. The commission proposes to increase the number of assembly seats in Kashmir division from 46 to 47. As earlier, 24 seats in the House are reserved for Pakistan-occupied Kashmir. For the first time in J&K's history, the commission proposes to reserve nine seats for Scheduled Tribes and seven for Scheduled Castes. The commission had first shared the draft with its associate members on February 4, asking them to submit their objections and suggestions by February 14. Two weeks on, almost every political party in J&K questioned one or more of the recommendations. NC, represented in the commission by Farooq and fellow MPs Mohammad Akbar Lone and Hasmain Masoodi, was the first to challenge the draft and file an objection. The party challenged the commission itself, pointing out that the J&K Reorganisation Act, 2019, was under judicial scrutiny. NC also accused the commission of seeking to over-write history. "The Habba Kadal assembly constituency, which has been removed from the list, is named after the famous Kashmiri queen-poetess," it said.
